I've used the Pro8 and Pro 6 flash cards before to install flash on my Dell. They worked great but they're not 100% reliable. So to make sure I'm getting my flash card speed, I'll compare it to the Pro8 cards in the testbed below. If they are both using the same speed, then I suggest you to purchase the same speed. The manufacturer's software. Most new flash cards, I've found out, don't come with the latest drivers. It may just come with a patch for earlier versions of the software. After you get the card installed with the latest drivers, the system will install properly. I also recommend using the free and open source VIToolbox. If all else fails, or it seems like you need a different driver or software, try setting up a different device to use as the vial to flash your card. This will save you time and make it easier to troubleshoot. Note: I haven't tested the free version that comes with the Pro 8+ flash card, so these results may vary.

If it's not the best speed or your flash card's firmware is incompatible with the firmware, or you are not very specific about your drive speed, I would suggest upgrading to the Pro Xpress 4.
